

HANDSOME AND GOOD.

A BOUQUET OF PRETTY NEW GIRLS
IN WASHINGTON.

They Come From All Over the Country.
Additions to Society at the Nation's Capital—The Assistants at Fashionable Functions.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

There are ever so many pretty new girls in Washington this season, coming from all over the country—north, south, east and west—and I will try to catch a few of them on the wing as they fly about "just too busy for anything" with luncheons, teas, balls and the endless round of calls.

Minneapolis sends us a lovely and very attractive girl, Miss "Birdie" Abbott, sister of Mrs. Lochren, wife of the commissioner of pensions, with whom she has lived ever since she was a little girl. Judge and Mrs. Lochren are devoted to her and have taken her about with them pretty much all over this country and Europe, and everywhere she has been greatly admired. She is tall and well shaped, with fine dark brown eyes fair complexion and brown hair. She has been carefully educated—speaks French and German well, is more than an average performer upon the piano, a graceful dancer and exceedingly interesting in conversation.

A charming member of the attorney general's family this season is Miss Mary Thomas. Her father, Mr. William Thomas, a prominent lawyer of San Francisco, is Mrs. Olney's brother. Miss Thomas came east last year for a finishing term at a Boston school and is now enjoying her first winter in society and helping others to enjoy it. She is tall and fair, has light brown hair and dark blue eyes, is fond of outdoor exercise—walking, swimming and tennis—and looks healthy, mentally and physically.

Another tall, fair girl is Miss Julia Murphy, daughter of Senator Murphy of New York. Everybody says at first sight, "Isn't she lovely?" and this impression is deepened at subsequent meetings. She reminds me of a tall, fair lily, and I think of her as blond until I remember that her hair is dark brown—though there is a hint of gold in it—and her eyes dark gray, but her complexion is very fair, and faint rose tints come and go in her face as she talks. She has not long been out of school, and this is, I fancy, her first season in society.

Miss Marion Semple Lindsay, daughter of Senator Lindsay of Kentucky, is tall, slender and of graceful bearing, with very dark brown hair and eyes, good features, perfect teeth, a sweet smile and bright expression. She has been carefully educated, talks well, is an accomplished horsewoman and graceful dancer, as a Kentucky girl should be, and altogether very charming.

A pretty and very popular girl is Miss Winifred Reed, sister of Mrs. Eckels, wife of the comptroller of the currency. She is of average height, with slender figure, fair complexion, wavy golden brown hair and blue gray eyes, which light up with the sweet smile which reveals white and perfect teeth and sets the dimples a-playing in her cheeks. She was born and brought up in Ottawa, Ill., and is a good example of the best type of the western girl—bright and breezy, like her native prairies, and sweet and modest, like the flowers dotting their surface, as I remember them in my childhood days. Miss Reed has been well educated, is rather musical and decidedly clever with her needle.

Another western girl who is enjoying her first season is Miss Cora Perkins, daughter of ex-Senator Perkins of Kansas. She has lived here most of her life, however, and graduated last fall with high honors at a Baltimore institute. She is tall and well shaped, with regular features, very dark hair and blue eyes. She has decided views upon many subjects and a pretty way of expressing them.

Miss Gertrude Caffery, daughter of the new senator from Louisiana, is a well rounded little maiden, rather below medium height, with brown hair and eyes, rosy cheeks and pleasant expression. She looks healthy and happy, is fond of dancing.

ing, walking and outdoor amusements and seems to be enjoying her first season very much, though doing double duty, as her mother is not strong enough to go out much.

Senator Gray of Delaware has two daughters "out." The eldest—a tall, fair and accomplished girl—came out last year, I think. Her sister Emily, just emancipated from school, has been having a delightful time going about and "assisting" at various functions. She is of medium height and slender figure, with fair complexion, light brown hair, blue eyes, dimpled cheeks and a very bright, happy expression.

Miss Mabel Money, daughter of Representative H. D. S. Money of Mississippi, is tall and fair, with easy and pleasing manners, better read than most girls of her age and a clever violinist. She enjoys going about and is, I imagine, a rather keen observer. Her sister Lillian is a brunette, still at her lessons, devoted to painting, for which she has much talent.

Two other musical girls who pay more attention to their studies than to society are the daughters of Representative Cannon of California. One is a violinist, the other devoted to her piano.

Lucy Follett Uhl, daughter of the assistant secretary of state, is a very attractive girl, tall and slight of figure, with light brown hair and dark brown eyes. She has been carefully educated and spent some time abroad perfecting herself in French and German, which she speaks fluently, and Spanish fairly well. She is very clever as an amateur photographer and a more than average pianist. JULIETTE M. BABBITT.

WOMAN'S WORLD IN PARAGRAPHS.

How Miss Anthony Laid Up Enough Money For Her Support.

"The bravest battle that ever was fought" is that fought by the woman suffragists. Susan B. Anthony declares that if in the battle now going on for suffrage in New York state the men do not vote as they should, she will come back as a spook and haunt them. "I shall certainly return," she says, "and they will find me a troublesome sister." Miss Anthony is now 74 years old, but looks much the same as she did 20 years ago. In a recent speech at Schenectady she said she had been in the newspaper business once. In that venture she lost all the money she had saved at schoolteaching and went $10,000 in debt. The paper was The Revolution, a weekly published in New York city to advocate woman's rights. Miss Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton were editors, with Parker Pillsbury as editorial contributor. It was able and brilliant, but for some reason it failed to be a go, and it was abandoned when it had rolled up the $10,000 debt. Susan Anthony, with the pluck and honesty characteristic of this great woman, resolved that no creditors should suffer loss through her. She undertook the task of paying all the debt herself and did so. Women lecturers were more of a rarity 25 years ago than they are now, and Susan entered the general lecture field. Lectures, too, were more popular then than they are now, and in six years she had paid every dollar of The Revolution debt. "Then I had a jubilee," exclaimed Miss Anthony. She lectured six years more. "I made enough money to live on, and I am living on it yet," she explained. As soon as she had laid up enough to support herself modestly she turned her back forever on the general lecture field and devoted her life henceforth to working for women. "I can get $50 to $100 a night to lecture, but I feel that the cause needs me, and I am devoting my time and energies to that cause." One theme which she is putting before her audiences this winter is the powerlessness of disfranchised classes to make, shape and control their own conditions—moral and industrial as well as political.

The secretary of the Nebraska State Farmers' Alliance is a woman—Mrs. J. M. Kelley.

Is it possible that there is any state university so forlorn and so far behind the times as not to admit women? If so, it should change its ways at once or go off and die. If there is a state school anywhere in which the word "male" is not especially specified, then women students have the right, without any further legislation, to attend that school and can sue for damages anybody who tries to keep them out.

Miss Emma C. Whitney is recording clerk in the Ohio house of representatives.

I met that grand friend of women, Judge Noah Davis, at the reception of the New York Woman's Press club the other evening. He wished to impress on all women in New York state the necessity of their working for the suffrage amendment this year. The constitutional convention takes place in May. If the word "male" is not stricken from the suffrage qualification this year, then New York women will have to wait 20 years more before the subject comes up again. Judge Davis wished all women everywhere to remember this too: There is nothing in any state constitution or in the United States constitution to debar a woman from holding any city, county, state or federal office, from that of president of the United States down, or up, as the case may be. Though women may not vote, they can be voted for for any office whatsoever. A woman, for instance, has a perfect right to be mayor of New York or Chicago or representative or senator. We could have women congressmen now, so far as anything to legally hinder them from holding the office goes. Judge Noah Davis is one of the most eminent jurists in America, and his opinion may be taken as final. Women ought to avail themselves of their right to be voted for and hold office, particularly school and municipal offices.

Mrs. Yates is mayor of Onehunga, New Zealand.

The Women's Educational and Industrial union of Boston has entered on a fresh field of relief work. Realizing that the women out of employment in Boston cannot be provided for in the city itself, they have undertaken to find work in the country for such as are willing to engage in domestic service. They are conducting correspondence with farmers' wives and other persons in the rural districts, and as fast as a place is found on a farm where help is needed in the housework the young woman who will go is sent thither. It is a fact that the girl who does housework is better treated on the farm than anywhere else. Often she is made one of the family and shares the home as if she were a daughter of the house. Household help is more needed by the hardworked farm wives than by almost any one else, and the girl who would enter the rural domestic service would be a godsend to them. But it will be interesting, it really will, to see how many of the unemployed women of Boston will be willing to go to a farm and do housework.

Mr. Wellesley A. Parker, whose success throughout the world in art matters, is well known has been specially employed to superintend the pictorial department of this work. Of the Crisp process, which is to be used, the following extract from a well known paper speaks well for it.

The Albany, N. Y. Evening Journal says: New Printing Process.—People unacquainted with the wonderful strides that have been made in Australia in printing, and the general depicting of nature in its most beautiful moods, have little idea of the complimentary and deserving success that Messrs. F. W. Niven and Co. of Ballarat, Australia have attained in their new "Crisp Photo" Process. We have been shown by Mr. Wellesley Parker, who is visiting us, samples of this new firm's beautiful process. The book that has lately run into three editions, of 5000 each, of "Sydney Illustrated" is beyond compare the most exquisite series of views ever appearing in the direction of printing. Episodes of the old days, and scenes of the beauties of the gardens of the city, are scattered throughout, interested with pictures of well-known citizens, that fidelity rival any photograph that is at present produced. Every credit is due to Australia, who has taken the lead in this innovation.

Interspersed through the book will be pages devoted to the establishments or leading wholesale and retail merchants. Not only will the exteriors of the buildings be shown, but the interiors will come out with great fidelity, showing every branch of the business in actual working order, thus giving to many a glimpse behind the scenes of the various details involved in producing the articles that they purchase in the showroom or at the counter. The first issue of "The Hawaiian Revolution" is to be 5000.

The principal industries and business establishments will be visited by Mr. Parker, who is now in this city, on behalf of the Publishers, and arrangements made by which the actual details of the various branches of the businesses will be represented pictorially. In addition, it is the desire of the Publishers to add to the completeness of the work by prevailing upon the citizens who have handsome residences or grounds, to arrange with Mr. Parker for their appearance in its pages.
